WESTERN FARMERS IN POLITICS TO STOP MARKET GAMBLING.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Bismarck, N. D., July 24.—Farmers launched a nationwide fight here today to stop gambling on grain and farm products in all stock markets of the United States. The movement is backed by the Non-Partisan Political League of North Dakota whose membership has just swept the state of North Dakota clean, in the recent primaries. Every state candidate nominated was theirs. They were undefeated everywhere.
Their fight was featured by three factors: It was launched by farmers, yet was sponsored and enthusiastically supported by labor and union men of North Dakota's cities.
Although various farmers' granges and individual clubs form the party it remained a unit to religion, politics or nationality, but for the single object of the complete abolition of all gambling with grains and foods.
Following the sweeping victory in North Dakota, league leaders are enrolling farmers of Minnesota for a similar fight. When Minnesota is swung, it is planned to make the movement national, picking up Socialists where farmers are in the minority.

LARGE CROWDS ARE IN ATTENDANCE AT THE CHAUTAUQUA

Program at Chautauqua Yesterday Afternoon and Evening Draws Large Crowds.

Yesterday's program at the Chautauqua, both in the afternoon and evening, proved to be a great drawing card, as hundreds of people were present at the entertainments. The programs given on Saturday brought many people out, and the attendance so far this year will greatly exceed that in former years.
The afternoon's program yesterday was opened with a popular concert by the Ellis Brooks Band. This musical organization was by far one of the best ever appearing in Janesville and made a great hit in their appearance yesterday. The band was organized under the personal direction of Ellis Brooks, who has supplied the Lincoln Chautauqua circuit with two bands for the past two years. Semi-sacred and sacred numbers made up the program yesterday along with a little popular music. Special mention is deserved in the selection "Stat Mater," which was rendered as the opening number yesterday afternoon. The Brooks Band appearing here yesterday was under the direction of Samuel Born, a well known leader, and was managed by David Smith, trombonist. Every member of the organization was a clean-cut fellow and many Janesville people made acquaintances with them.
Following the band concert in the afternoon Maynard Lee Daggy, prominent Chautauqua speaker, a college teacher and professor for the past fourteen years, delivered a lecture, "The Challenge of the Twentieth Century." His talk was very interesting and commanded the close attention of every person in the tent. In the evening, after the musical program, Mr. Daggy delivered another popular lecture, "The Man With the Hammer." The youths' Chautauqua, which is held every morning, is causing much interest and many boys and girls make their appearance on the grounds.
Saturday's program consisted of a delightful concert of vocal and instrumental solos by the Schroeder Quartet, Smith Dorman, the poetry man, delighted the audience with an interesting lecture and demonstration of his art. In the evening following the Schroeder concert, Miss Jeanette Kling gave a dramatic recitation. This afternoon the Emerson Winters company appeared in a unique entertainment. Dr. James R. Gettys, a well known speaker, delivered an address "The Man With the Hammer." Tonight's program will be of special interest to the children. At seven-thirty the Emerson Winters company will give a unique and lively entertainment of bird warbling and pianolox. At eight-fifteen o'clock the Edwin Brush company will appear in their famous act, the Brush company present one of the highest acts of Chautauqua acts, and are magicians of nationwide reputation. Tomorrow's program will complete the Chautauqua.

FINDS LIFE IN ARMY IS NOT ALL A JOKE

Charles Lichtfus Writes to Parents Telling of Light Rations at San Antonio Camp.

"This soldier life isn't all a joke," according to Charles Lichtfus son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lichtfus who reside near Janesville. Young Lichtfus is in Camp Grant, San Antonio, in a letter to his mother he tells of short rations issued to the Wisconsin guards in camp at San Antonio.
"We only get fed two times a day," Lichtfus writes, "and that only means two pieces of bread, a spoonful of beans and a cup of coffee. I have lost about twenty pounds already." In addition there is hard work which is by no means popular with the boys in camp.
Lichtfus writes that the heat is severe and that the thermometer stands above ninety degrees every day, although Wisconsin can boast of equally as warm temperatures both day and night. Lichtfus writes that "one has to be pretty careful as there are all kinds of insects, but one good thing about it is one can take a bath every day."

Grape-Nuts

embodies the full, rich nutriment of whole wheat combined with malted barley. This combination gives it a distinctive, delicious flavor unknown to foods made from wheat alone.

Only selected grain is used in making Grape-Nuts and through skillful processing it comes from the package fresh, crisp, untouched by hand, and ready to eat.
Through long baking, the energy producing starches of the grain are made wonderfully easy of digestion.

A daily ration of this splendid food yields a marvelous return of health and comfort.

SIX YEAR OLD BOY SAVES BABY'S LIFE WHEN HOUSE BURNS

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Snyder,
Six Miles North of City, Saves
Infant From Flames.

Theodore Snyder, aged six or seven years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Snyder, who reside on the W. H. Ashcroft farm, six miles north of this city, is hailed today by his playmates as a courageous hero. When the house occupied by the Snyders suddenly took fire Saturday afternoon during the absence of both mother and father, young Snyder, five months old baby who lay on his cot in one of the front rooms. While he sent the other children to secure aid he hurried into the burning house and carried the infant and its bed. The house and its contents were entirely destroyed by the flames before neighbors could arrive.

Mrs. Snyder had left the children for a few minutes while she attended to duties which took her to the Ashcroft farm house, a quarter of a mile down the road. The baby was always in the house and the other children were playing on the hillside in the rear. They noticed smoke coming from the kitchen and young Theodore realizing the danger, took things in charge, sending the other children for aid while he at once dashed in to carry out the baby. The fire spread rapidly and when the first neighbor arrived it had practically consumed the entire house so that it was impossible to save any of the contents.

The loss was a severe one for the Snyder family. It is a very small one on their backs, except for the garments on their backs, and without household furniture and utensils. In addition they lost a considerable sum of money. Mrs. Snyder included a sum of money estimated at $500.00. The baby belonged to Mr. Snyder and one of the older boys. A small amount of insurance was carried.
The present Mr. and Mrs. Snyder and their family of seven children are living in the Ashcroft cottage, which is located on the river bank across the road from the farm-house.

PETEY DINK—HE'LL GET ONTO IT FINALLY

CARDS WIN AND LOSE
IN TWO GAME SERIESJANESVILLE SHUTS OUT BELOIT IN SATURDAY'S GAME BUT MAKES SAD SHOWING
SUNDAY.

FAIRIES GET REVENGE

Fairies Come to Janesville With Blood
In Their Eyes Pounding Out a 12 to 4 Victory.

Beloit still holds the edge in the inter-city series, with three games won and one lost. "Red" Ormsby won the Saturday game at Beloit in a walk, leading the Fairies a string of goose eggs a mile long. In the meantime the Cardinals drove four counters across the matter by hard and timely hitting. Ormsby driving two runs in with clean hits and scoring one tally himself.

Run one Beloit man connected with Ormsby's offerings for a blow that threatened disaster. Keene bled a long triple to right center and that worthy was caught at the plate in an attempt to stretch it into a home run. Wootton failed miserably.

"Jack" Wootton, hero of many battles tried to hang up a second victory for Janesville yesterday but failed miserably. After getting by nicely in the first inning he seemingly lost all his "juice" in the second and what the Beloit sluggers did to him was a shame. In the third, batsman, two wild errors, two singles and three triples sent the big fellow to right field and brought Chamberlain to the hurling hill.

Coming in with a "cold" arm, Chamberlain was greeted by Breton with a home run, Keene, up for the second time in the inning, walked, and scored the inning by fanning after nine runs had been chalked up.

After the second the Avalon southpaw had the Fairies guessing and would have held the visitors to a long rally with proper support, a passed ball by Heidemann in the ninth allowing two men to cross the plate.

Chamberlain's work, considering the circumstances, which he was forced to labor shows that the lad from Avalon is entitled to a chance to work regularly on the slab and the fans voted their approval of his doing in no uncertain terms yesterday.

Trounce Beloit Saturday.

Beloit did not have a look in against "Red" Ormsby the big Chicago lad. Saturday. Ten Beloit men reached first base and seven of them were killed on the running paths. In fact only thirty men faced the big fellow, four of them reaching first base on error, but Ormsby's fast one for a triple in the second inning and was killed at the plate by virtue of some fast and accurate throwing by Joe Ryan and Joe Nelson.

Janesville scored in the second. Heidemann, the first man up singled to left. Loeschner juggled the drive and Heidemann took an extra base. Nelson dumped a sacrifice and Brenningham after driving Heidemann back to second, made a bad play to first and Nelson was safe. Peterson laid down a perfect bunt and the bases were full. Attack was walked forcing in Heidemann and with nobody out it looked like a big inning for Janesville but Ryan fanned, a Casey, and Ormsby's slapper to Breton forced Nelson out at first. Casey ended the inning by hitting to Keene.

In the Beloit half, Keene, first man up caught a fast one on the trade mark. Ryan caught up with the ball and threw to Nelson who relayed it to the plate in time to touch Keene's heels as he slid on.

After once again did Beloit threaten to score, in the fourth, Thomas led with a single to left, went to second while Peterson threw out Fountaine, took third on a wild pitch and then cut off at the plate on Breton's head bouncer to Peterson.

Janesville scored in the fourth on a long triple and Ormsby's time total to be sixth by virtue of doubles by Keene and Ormsby and Finn's single to center.

The work of Ormsby, Peterson, Finn and Heidemann for Janesville was sensational. Peterson especially doing some fine work at third.

Sunday's Excitement.

The least said of Sunday's game the better, though the game was interesting to some extent despite the one sided score. To start the game Wootton retired the Fairies in easy style and Janesville started after Lafferty as though the Beloit pet would be devalued in short order. Anderson singled with one down, and Hornsburg doubled to right. Heidemann hit to Breton and Anderson expired at the plate. Brownigan then allowed a pitched ball to ooze through and Hornsburg tallied for the first run of the game and the goose hung high for Janesville for a moment.

What happened in the second is painful to describe. Keene first up singled to right, and promptly stole second; Brenningham connected a triple to right center and nearly tore a wheel loose sliding to first; and Hornsburg at first via Finn. Garner walked. Wootton fired to first to catch Garner and Olsen, running for Brenningham. Wootton fired to first to catch Garner and Olsen, running for Brenningham. Accumulate Twenty Hits Against Detroit's Fifteen—Jack Ness Gets Record for Game.

The White Sox outslugged the Tigers yesterday, getting twenty hits and won a big battle, 12 to 9. The Sox used five pitchers. Williams, Durocher, Cicotte, Wolfing and Russell, in that order. Detroit called four to the slab—Poland, Cunningham, Dubuc and Danks.

In the fourth inning each team had two hits. The Sox had eight runs and the Tigers one less after that. The Sox still continued the rampage. In the fifth inning the Jennings bunch drove in four runs for two runs out, which placed them in the lead for six minutes. In the fourth the Sox got six men around, after two were out and then on managed to show their heels for the remainder of the distance.

Jack Ness was the batting hero, getting five hits—three single, a double and a triple.

RESERVE BANK MEN LEARN THAT ADVERTISING PAYS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Minneapolis, Minn., July 24.—Officials of the Ninth District Federal Reserve bank here today announced that they have learned it pays to advertise. Placing bonds of the United States in the hands of individual investors in denominations as low as $100 has been accomplished through newspaper advertising.

"Such a step is in keeping with the best counsel of European nations," Chairman John H. Rich of the Federal reserve bank said today. "The people must be led to think that this is their government, and that they have an interest in it. Their holding government bonds will help them. They will realize they have loaned a friend some money and have his note."

CITY WATER.

In years gone by when we had a dry summer the city parks were watered and the grass kept green. The shrubs were kept alive by frequent streams of cooling fluid and the taxpayer paid the toll. Now the city owns the water works, students at schools go around to take the meter readings, prices are higher, our grass in the parks is practically dead, our shrubs dying, all for lack of moisture, and still the citizens own the water works.

Persons without meters can use their hose early and late and pay simply the regular flat rate. Meter owners, whose meters are read by youths, not experts, pay the maximum and must suffer with the rest of the public. Yet the city owns the water works.

The streets are dry and dusty. The streets are swept without being sprinkled first, the dust sweeps into the business houses, into the private residences. It spreads germs of all sorts of disease, of every kind of contagion, if we can believe scientists, which a good sprinkling would prevent, and yet the people own the water works?

Merchants sweep the sidewalks' dust and refuse into the streets, the street sweeper comes along at night and sweeps it, part back onto the sidewalk and part into the dustpan, and the same thing goes on ad infinitum. Yet the people own the water works and a good sprinkling of the business streets would prevent all this.

Some day some city official is going to be strong enough to stand up and remedy a whole lot of these abuses the public have to undergo. It will not be a political issue, but one of humanitarianism. The small water consumer will have equal rights with the big consumer and the streets will be flushed before being swept and some other cause of complaint will have to be found relative to this troublesome question. Still the water company is owned by the people!

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

The backbone of the present military system of the United States today is the national guard organization of the various states. Upon the efficiency of this citizen soldiery depends the actual reserve force of the nation in case of foreign invasion or in times of stress. That this organization is far from perfect is realized by all who have studied the situation, but until some other method of interesting the young men of this day and age in military drill is evolved it must be continued.

Tuesday evening will witness the mustering in of a company of Janesville young men who are organized as a military unit of the Wisconsin national guard. These young men have been recruited from all ranks and files and are in earnest in their allegiance to the state government, to the national government, and for the honor of Janesville. It is an event in the civic life of the community and citizens generally will witness with endorsing the movement by their attendance at the exercises and approval of the action these patriotic citizens have taken.

Time was when Janesville had two companies in the national guard. Before that period Janesville had given its quota to the military organization of the nation in the civil war. In 1898 the Bower City furnished a company for the call for troops and at every period in the history of the state and nation this community has met the demand by a hearty response to the call for duty.

After several years of inactivity in military affairs Janesville will again enter the lists of cities in Wisconsin that support the military organization of the nation. Tuesday night will witness the installation of the company in this city. Its membership is not confined to Janesville alone, but to the whole county, and it is to be hoped that many young men who have not yet signed the muster roll will do so for the purpose of securing the military training that will follow and which is so essential in this day and age when preparedness is being preached.

FACTS ON THE BLACKLIST.
"Vacillating where it should be firm, precipitate where it should be circumspect, the administration in Washington shows once more an incapacity to realize the extent of the problems with which it is confronted. This is again the case in the matter of the allied blacklist. It should be understood that this is an allied measure, and not one adopted by Great Britain on her own initiative," says the Wall Street Journal. "Of course, for obvious reasons, German sympathizers here have done all they could to cast the entire odium upon Great Britain. But the blacklisting is under the terms of the recommendations of the economic conference of the allies held at Paris on June 14, 15, 16 and 17, 1916. The agreement, being a diplomatic matter, is in French, but here is the official translation of the pertinent clause, as presented to the British House of Parliament:

"Measures for the War Period. The laws and regulations prohibiting trading with the enemy shall be brought into accord. For this purpose:

"A.—The allies will prohibit their own subjects and citizens in their territories from carrying on any trade with:

"1. The inhabitants of enemy countries whatever their nationality.

"2. Enemy subjects, wherever resident.

"3. Persons, firms and companies whose business is controlled wholly or partially by enemy subjects or is a subject to enemy influence and whose names are included in a special list.

This agreement also covers transitory measures for the period of commercial, industrial, agricultural and maritime reconstruction of the allies' countries, and permanent measures of mutual assistance and collaboration among the allies."

"While it is essential that the administration shall stand up for every American right, and while we are not bound by agreements to our prejudice, it is essential also to recognize that this is not a quarrel with Great Britain, if there is to be a quarrel, but with all the entente powers, including France, Russia, Belgium, Portugal, Japan, even Serbia and Montenegro. Firms and individuals, blacklisted by Great Britain, are equally blacklisted by all these countries.

"While the opinion may be frankly expressed that the entente powers are incurring the enmity of neutrals for a disproportionate result, it is necessary at the same time to point out to Washington how large a contract it undertakes and how necessary it will be to exercise caution and common sense."

OWNED OR RENTED.

A little group of men who have dealt considerably in real estate in a number of cities, got to comparing experiences the other day. They were discussing the question whether more or less people own their homes than formerly. It was the final consensus that there are fewer houses owned by the occupants than formerly.

Workmen nowadays cherish tenaciously their freedom of movement. If they hear of a better job, they want to be footloose to pull up and go. They do not work as long in one place as formerly. The man who has stuck to one job ten years is a member of the old guard, a conspicuous figure. There is an unwillingness to tie up money in any one place.

As a result it was the feeling that there is an increasing contrast between the various sections of growing towns. The better houses are very nicely kept up. People settle down in them in a permanent way. They plant shrubbery and cultivate flowers and fertilize and decorate their lawns with an eye to the future. Meanwhile in the less costly homes the tenants are more mobile. They hate to do any permanent grading or planting on their landlord's real estate. They may be far away another year, and other tenants would reap the advantage of their labor. Let the landlord do it is their view. Usually the landlord does not see how beautification will improve his place.

"All of which tends to create residence districts without beauty, plain and bare. Also the man in a rented house is less likely to save. A mortgage is a constant incentive to thrift. But the renter feels independent and is apt to be indifferent to a bank account. It is not easy to build up substantial and beautiful towns on the basis of the modern restless population.

The Chicago Tribune took occasion to call attention to the fact that La Follette had outlived his usefulness in the United States senate in a recent editorial. Rock county supporters of M. G. Jeffris had realized this fact for some time past and are urgently inviting the republicans of the state to support the county candidate for the United States senate at the coming primaries so that the state may be redeemed to the republican ranks once more.

Where are all those wildfowl the Rock County Rod and Gun club were going to place in the Rock river for the enjoyment of the public? One private individual has a flock of wild ducks that delight the daily audience along the Milwaukee or Court street bridges, and a pair of swans that delight at times to graciously enter the water, but where are the other water fowls we were told were going to grace the stream this summer?

The death of John Cunningham, president of the Rock County Bar association, has left a vacancy in the ranks of the older men who have been an honor to the legal profession of the community. Mr. Cunningham was a man beloved by all who came in contact with him and his place will be hard to fill in a community that is as closely interwoven as Janesville.

The drinking fountain established at the corner of the alley, on the east approach to the Milwaukee street bridge, is one of the most welcome improvements that have been installed for some time past. These hot days show an innovation is welcomed by everyone.

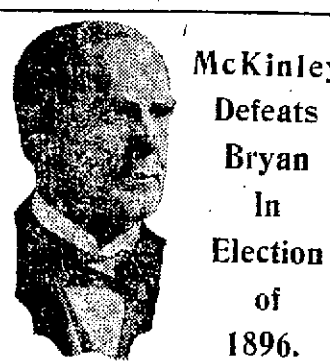

Tomorrow night witnesses Janesville's advent into the ranks of the Wisconsin national guard again. It should be an occasion of general rejoicing and jubilation. Joining and jubilation.

ELECTING A PRESIDENT

McKinley Defeats Bryan In Election of 1896.

FREE silver was the issue in 1896. William Jennings Bryan was nominated by the Democrats, while William McKinley of Ohio was nominated by the Republicans. While the popular vote was close, McKinley received 271 votes in the electoral college to Bryan's 176. Garret A. Hobart was elected vice president. Other political parties had sprung up by this time, including the Prohibitionists and Socialists.

McKinley was again elected in 1900, defeating Bryan by a vote practically the same as that of 1896. Theodore Roosevelt of New York was elected vice president. McKinley was assassinated about six months after his second inauguration, and Roosevelt served three and one-half years of his second term.

(Watch for the election of Roosevelt in 1904 in our next issue.)

Little table in the Cafe Highfeidia. They were not yet engaged. "I think," she said brightly, "I'll have some beveled oysters with sauce a la Bryan, kidded tenderloin with Brussels peas, nursery asparagus on toast, and a peach Marie Garden."

He ordered crackers, cheese and coffee with a sickly smile, and the orchestra played "They come High but Have 'Em Low."

They were facing each other across a little table in the Cafe Highfeidia. They had been engaged four months. "How about a nice planked steak?" he suggested hopefully.

"I think," she said slowly, "we'd both better just order something light like ice cream and one of those French turts. We can't save up for a mahogany dining room set and have planked steaks too. Very well, if you're so afraid of what the waiter will think, I'll give the order myself."

And the orchestra played "When You Land 'Em, You've Got to Stand 'Em."

Beware of the fellow that comes Along with a book under his arm
And starts to say "Now, my dear sir, I am not going to try to sell you anything," for he is either a liar or a fool, and he ain't no fool.

If job ever had to take his wife to a ball game and explain to her he would have lost his chief claim to immortal fame.

The fellows that cuss the most and abuse the live wires while getting ready to go to a party are generally the ones who enjoy it the most after they get there.

Come to think of it, I don't know of any millionaire or railroad president who spent his youth standing around the street corners in the evening smokin' cigars.

In an unguarded moment when my wits were out wool gathering and my guardian angel was asleep at the switch, I confided to a friend the fact that I might, some day, take out some life insurance.

My friend had a friend who was in the life insurance business. That has enough. Life insurance news travels fast and gets around a new feeding ground like flies around a sugar bowl. They seem to rally like crows and to attract more of their kind.

I told my friend about my intention at noon over our lunch. By 3 o'clock seven life insurance agents had called and had killed the afternoon. There were five more waiting outside of the sidewalk and three in the street car which I took for my home.

When I reached home there were nine on the front porch and seven in the parlor entering and leaving with horrible tales of life insurance or the lack of it, in which there were visions of orphans in the poorhouse.

At 10 o'clock that night the last agent had spoken his piece and I parted, although several had volunteered to stay all night and continue the argument in the morning. After listening to them all the evening I had every symptom of every disease that has ever been invented.

When I awoke in the morning there were six new life insurance agents sitting on the porch and it was only 6 o'clock. They seemed to breed like parkies. But I'm a pigs although, of course, a life insurance agent is not that kind of a pig.

I escaped by the back gate and took the car for my office. As I drew near I thought the building was on fire. The street was packed with people away out to the car tracks.
They were life insurance agents waiting for me to open my office.

I didn't get off the car, but continued on to the railroad station. I am now staying down in the country with my wife's folks for a month or two until the excitement blows over.
There is only one way to get life insurance and that is to say nothing but just go and get it.

SEA SALVAGE BRINGS HIGH AUCTION PRICES

Everything Imaginable Washed Ashore And Instantly Picked Up.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Dieppe, July 24.—Flotsam and jetsam cast up by equinoctial tides and sold here by auction under minute regulations that date from the time of Colbert, reflect each year the destructive force of nature in the sea. In ordinary years it is small wreckage such as pieces of rigging, fishing vessels, broken rudders, barrels of tar and so on, but this wreckage washed ashore on the coast of Normandy has lately gone beyond all previous records.

Jagged wounds in pieces of ships' hulls showing the traces of torpedoes, barbed wire, castles, more or less chipped, dented, or crushed by contact with the sharp reefs, with cordage and smashed cabin furniture, fire-savory bales of rubber and cotton, barrels of oil and molasses, casks of tallow, with a conglomerate of apparatus and paraphernalia such as none but a mariner could identify or connect with any rational use, were collected in one lot along with a baby's cradle and a beheaded doll. The cradle was almost intact, the body of the beheaded doll was blackened as if by powder.

There are regular buyers of the flotsam and jetsam of this coast, who come here every year to speculate upon the season's disasters. The miscellaneous debris of an average year has acquired a certain value that none but these experts would ever venture to get out of. This year, in harmony with the general movement, nearly everything brought war prices. There were some rare commodities in the salvage and there was sentiment.

The industrial alcohol, rubber, tallow and oil went to unprecedented prices, other miscellany that would have been comparatively neglected in ordinary years was readily turned into money from the buyers.

The buyers come mostly from Havre, but this year many came from as far as Paris. The industrial alcohol went to a merchant from Armentieres who is still trading with soldiers there under contract for uniforms. Alcohol is rare along the front. With the cash bought by the man from Armentieres, the soldier's life insurance will be able to beat their ration.

Life belts and floats as a rule go begging with buyers from the interior. This year there was a taker

JUST A MINUTE

LIVE WIRES

"He is a live wire," they say of a man. The live wire sends telegrams, and doesn't care a bit. He talks over the long distance phone just as if it were next door. Any moment he is apt to hop on the eighteen-hour train for New York to get over to a deal. If he can't get a lower, he will take an upper, and maybe he will take a stateroom. Before he gets anywhere he starts back. He is here and there. Nothing stops him. Oh, he is all over the continent! He has electric buttons all over his desk, and now and then he gives a couple of them a jab. This brings somebody bounding, and the live wire doesn't look up, but says: "Never mind. That will be all." He likes to kill off stenographers, office boys, and other help. Oh, he is a dynamo! They say he wears out the people who work with him. Every day he has a luncheon engagement and stays three hours. He is very hard to get at. He tells the girl in the outer office to fight everybody off, that he is a busy man and can hardly ever see anybody. "Is it VERY important?" Or he gets into a conference, all clothed in tobacco smoke and surrounded with great brass cuspidors, and positively does not wish to be interrupted. He keeps a kit of golf clubs over in the corner to prove he just has to have relaxation sometimes.

Most men would let the pace he goes. "Got me a taxi. Sign my mail. Damn! I wish I didn't have to go to Detroit."

Quiet, easy-going old men, who chew five-cent plug tobacco and wear Congress shoes with rubber stripes in the sides, and who have plenty of time and a speak of tobacco juice on their shirt, and who can say "No" without having a two-hour conference about it, and who never dashed hither and thither in their lives—seem to be the ones who get things done and amass the fortunes. They call their wives "Mamma" and at night they sit up until nine or ten and play dominoes. They aren't very live, but somehow they get something in the vault at the trust company.

for every one offered. A belt that resembled one of these while wreaths sold in Paris for the decoration of graves with the inscription "s. s. Lomas, London" upon it, a belt to which some life had clung to the last moment of physical resistance, no doubt brought the unheard of price of ten francs.

Gang planks, ship's boats, and ladders, along with cabin furniture and bunk clothing, brought only the average auction price, but the smaller debris—things no landlubber can expect ever to find useful, were snapped up by the buyers from the interior if they showed the slightest evidence of having gone through one of the sea dramas of the great war.

All this wreckage gathered along the coast by customs officials, inventoried and classified, is sold after the legal lapse of time, if unclaimed before. The proceeds, less the "import duty"—are held for thirty years in the treasury of the Marine Invalids, and definitely acquired by that charity only if no one establishes a claim upon it in the meantime.

WILLIAMS ARRESTED ON DOUBLE COUNT

DISTRICT ATTORNEY SWEARS OUT TWO WARRANTS AGAINST SOUTH JANEVILLE HOTEL PROPRIETOR.

GOES BEFORE MAXFIELD

Arraigned This Morning and Trial and Examination on Charges Are To Be Held Soon.

Two warrants were sworn out by District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie and served today on Frank Williams, proprietor of the road house known as the Northwestern Hotel, at South Janesville. The first charged Williams with selling liquor on Sunday, a second and more serious charge was keeping a disorderly house, specifically naming as between the 14th and 22nd of July.

Attorney Ryan and Mr. Dunwiddie were to decide this afternoon on a date for the examination and a date for the trial. The Sunday code violation can be taken in trial almost immediately while in the other case arrangements must be made for the preliminary examination.

He was arraigned in court this morning. The charges were read and talk personal to the district attorney, Judge Maxfield and Williams' attorney, Attorney Edward H. Ryan, reached an agreement to hold open the trial until the afternoon.

While Williams was in court, the father of one of the two girls, arrested at South Janesville Saturday morning, and both of whom admitted spending a portion of the night in the roadhouse with two Janesville young men, was in the court attempting to secure the release of his daughter from the county jail. He spent a portion of the morning in the district attorney's office, but was unable to see Mr. Dunwiddie, as he was at the city hall on other business. He was left before Mr. Dunwiddie returned.

Girls' Hearing Tuesday.

What part the girls will play in the legal action in the most serious case against Williams is not known. The district attorney is determined to offer a repetition of such instances and is striving to give a moral warning to young girls and mothers who have been known to give a girl a bad name by allowing her to spend the night in a roadhouse.

The hearing will be held Tuesday morning. If the charges are substantiated, then the court will have full jurisdiction to place the girls in the state school for reform. May Deny Charge.

An idea of what may constitute a portion of Williams' defense was given by Attorney Ryan this morning. From the fact that the district attorney in his charging the defendant with conducting a house of ill fame during a specified time, and this time including the night in which the girls admitted being at the hotel, it appears that the girls may be called as witnesses against Williams.

Attorney Ryan talking of the case this morning said that the girls were not at the hotel from this statement. He said that Williams had served as a uasher at the church. He was also a loyal member of the Carroll Council Knights of Columbus lodge in Janesville. He was a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters and the Ancient Order of Hibernians. His passing away will leave a sad vacancy in the ranks of the organizations.

For the past number of years he has been employed at the local Post Office and in service there he has been a faithful and ardent worker for the government.

Besides his grief stricken parents he leaves to mourn his death one brother, Edward M. of Poughkeepsie, New York; one sister, George H. of Janesville; and many friends and relatives. Funeral services will be held from the St. Patrick's church Tuesday morning at nine o'clock. Interment will be made in the Mt. Olivet cemetery.

POLITICAL FIGHT IN BADGER STATE HOT

SIX CANDIDATES ALREADY IN THE FIELD FOR GOV. ERMOR.

SITUATION SUMMED UP

Milwaukee Free Press Takes Broad View of Situation and Shows How the Vote-getters Are Being Wildered.

"A hot weather political Marathon in the various crusades of persuasion and education which have been mapped out by the men behind the guns which are supposed to be the aspirants for United States senator, governor and over the state ticket and in the legislature. The voter at the primary on September 5 cannot complain this year of a dearth of candidates from which to make a choice. So far as the two old parties are concerned, the ticket will look split up according to factions, something like this:

Conservative Republicans. Governor—Governor E. L. Philipp. Lieutenant-governor—Major Marius Coussins, Eau Claire. State Treasurer—George L. Harbison, Elkhorn. State Treasurer—State Treasurer Henry Johnson, Madison. State Treasurer—General—Emmett R. Hicks, Oshkosh. La Follette Republicans. Governor—William H. Hutton, New London. Lieutenant Governor—Lieut. Governor E. F. Dittmar, Baraboo. Secretary of State—Merlin Hull, Black River Falls. State Treasurer—Alvin Peterson, Soldiers' Grove. Attorney General—Attorney General Walter C. Owen, Maiden Rock. Democratic. Governor—John Williams, Madison. Lieutenant Governor—John Cudahy, Milwaukee. Secretary of State—E. C. Jones, Portage. State Treasurer—John C. Reutemann, Milwaukee. Attorney General—Thomas H. Ryan, Appleton.

Governor—Francis J. McGovern, Milwaukee, republican ticket. Governor—Don C. Hall, Stevens Point, republican ticket. Charles J. Staudenmayer, Caledonia, democratic ticket. Wisconsin socialists will have a ticket in the field, from United States senator down and their leaders predict that a large increase in the party vote will be shown because of the strife evident in both old parties.

One Democratic State. While the anti-Williams and anti-Philipp have only one ticket there can be no question that thousands of them will vote this year in the republican party. The results of the primary can be such that thousands of republicans may vote for democratic nominees at election on November 7.

Many of the anti-Williams and anti-Philipp might well say that one faction of the republican party should join with one faction of the democratic party and leave the two remaining factions to get together and make a deal with the La Follette men. Their assumption is that Williams and McGovern are to vote for La Follette and the anti-Williams and anti-Philipp are to vote for McGovern, regardless of the chances of La Follette's hand-picked and good natured gubernatorial stalwart, John C. Owen.

See Victory for Wolfe. Certain it is that La Follette followers will not support Jeffris who is the nominee. And this is where the Williams democratic figure (but they have the better of the arrangement, as Mr. Wolfe, with no opposition, is certain of nomination. They believe that the anti-Williams and anti-Philipp are to vote for McGovern, regardless of the chances of La Follette's hand-picked and good natured gubernatorial stalwart, John C. Owen.

McGovern will have no state ticket. He is going out for the nomination, and whether he gets it or not, he will have after the November election a ticket in return, but unfortunately that something is not in the cards just now, as McGovern is opposing their gubernatorial candidate.

The great question is fact that McGovern did not come out for United States senator instead of for governor. Had he done so early in the year, it appears certain that there would have been no Jeffris candidacy.

With the votes which Jeffris will receive from the McGovern republicans and from the anti-Williams democrats, La Follette's vote will figure out, up against the fight of his career.

Start Speaking Campaigns. Every day brings a new angle to the situation, and political wisecracks, election return dopsters and shrewd bettors have thrown their hands in the air in resignation to await the first few weeks of actual campaigning before trying to get down to bedrock again.

Jeffris, McGovern and Hutton have made some speeches. Governor Philipp will make the stump next month. All other candidates on all the states will begin speaking campaigns this week.

Rock County Man Willing to Make Contribution If Janesville and Line City Start Move.

Representatives from Rock County and fifteen members of a committee on good roads from De Kalb, Illinois, made an inspection tour over country roads in Rock county today. City Engineer C. W. Kerch, George Parker and County Road Commissioner John D. Morgan accompanied the party. The Illinois party was headed by Mr. F. W. Morgan, state road engineer of Illinois. They started from Beloit and the first visit was made on concrete road near the F. W. Morgan farm at Beloit. The Afton road which is now under construction was inspected and a visit was made at the store crushing plant. Mr. Morgan who is a pioneer advocate and supporter in the construction of good roads stated this morning, "I don't get together and push the building of concrete road between the two cities. Should such a movement be started, Mr. Morgan suggested that he would gladly contribute a sum of money towards the cause."

The inspection party stopped in this city at the Grand Hotel for dinner and from there they took over the country roads in Dane County. The Illinois men spoke very highly of the road construction that is being done in Rock county.

Four Hundred People Register at Rest Room in The Last Week—Is Getting Popular.

The Women's Rest room on East Milwaukee street has been a very popular place for out of town guests. During the past week about four hundred visitors registered there and many of the city girls have found it a comfortable place to take their noon lunch. Among them were girls from the Business College, the Parker Pen company, the Steam Laundry, and The Golden Eagle. Three ladies and a child from out of town, were in the room, and it begins to show what the Women's Rest room means to the city of Janesville.

All bills against the Janesville City Federation of Women should be sent before August 1 to Mrs. C. S. Atwood, secretary, 332 North Washington street.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

CHAPTER 90.

In spite of the application of a hundred and one public health achievements, in spite of extraordinary public health discoveries and disclosures, in spite of the efforts of public health officials, many diseases, scarcely known even under primitive conditions of disorder and insanitary environment are on the constant increase. In the old days man's food was to be denatured. Considering all the fluences now at work in his behalf which would be the effect upon his health if his food were not denatured today?

Occasionally in opposition to the facts concerning the high death-rate and the statistics which record the physical deteriorations of the United States one hears some such argument as this: "Years ago we had a much higher mortality record than we now have."

"Everybody knows that the death rate per 100,000 has dropped tremendously," they argue. "In the face of this constant decrease in the death rate, the people today are living longer than they ever lived before. It also follows that if there was anything wrong with their food, it would not show such a consistent increase in health and longevity."

"The death rate for the City of New York for the week ending Sept. 4, 1915, as given out by the Health Department was only 11.56 per 1,000, whereas as a half century ago it was at least twice that much. It follows, therefore, that the men living in New York City today are better fed than they were fifty years ago, and all the arguments, however strongly fortified they seem to be by facts must be set aside when they attempt to show that there is something seriously at fault with present day diet."

I have confronted this surprising argument in various quarters a hundred times. Those who advance it are honest in their convictions, but in the first place a half century ago statistics were not kept as they are kept today, and in the second place, the statistics kept today are not, in any manner, indicative of an improvement in the quality of the general food supply with one notable exception—milk.

When people say that the death rate has dropped from 20 per 1,000 to 11.56 per 1,000 they simply do not know what they are talking about, because no figures as to 20 per 1,000 exist on which to base a comparison, and in the particular instance 11.56, the figures are meaningless, owing to the overstatement of 300,000. Officials to make a good showing, based on an error involving a difference of 800,000 creatures who do not exist except on paper.

In 1910, the federal census ascertained that New York City had a population of 4,766,882. In 1915 the state count showed a population of 5,066,222, an actual increase of 300,000. Notwithstanding the official enumerations the Health Department deliberately credited the city with 5,366,532, an increase of 1,100,000 in five years, whereas in fact there was an increase of only 300,000.

Therefore, we have the Health Department figuring the death rate on a population of 5,366,000, whereas only 5,066,000 persons live. The result is, of course, that the rate given, 11.56, as it is worked out on fictitious figures, is entirely too low, notwithstanding the fact that it has inspired so much vainglorious boasting, and so many empty congratulations, and some jubilee dinners.

In an editorial comment on these facts the New York Sun, Sept. 12, 1915, said: "The error due to overestimating the number of residents in the city runs through all the computations of the Health Department based thereon, and obviously renders the results of no value for the purposes for which they are used."

The actual death rate in New York was approximately 3.4 not 11.56. The cheering figures which have been their comforting significance. Now let us see what the actual facts indicate.

One does not have to go back fifty years to stress the fact that epidemics that swept over the country, now a curse almost of the past.

Yellow fever counted its victims by the thousands, while smallpox kept pace with this dread disease as a slaughterer of men.

When appendicitis, one of the victims of which are now saved through a better understanding of the nature of the disease and its treatment.

seized upon its victims those victims died, while all the deaths were recorded against the mysterious and meaningless but convenient phrase "inflammation of the bowels."

"Surgeons knew little of the use of antiseptics, so when men were cut, wounded, or bruised gangrene, blood poisoning, or tetanus fought for their lives."

Convulsions of infants and cholera infantum destroyed hundreds of thousands. Child-bed fever, due to infection through ignorance of aspsitis at birth, was a nightmare in every community.

Skilled physicians and surgeons were not plentiful, nor was their services easily obtained. Puerperal hemorrhage, other accidents of labor, and puerperal septicemia were common.

It was not so long ago when piles of garbage, filth and decay were to be seen lying in the camps, hamlets, villages, towns and cities of the entire country.

Today every town has its health officer and every city has its health department. As much money is spent on health departments in the United States today as is spent upon education.

In the year 1914 for the City of New York alone $3,534,240 were appropriated for such current expenses. There was little army of 4,321 on the Health Department payroll watching over the sanitary conditions of floating baths, stationary pools, bathing beaches, tents, camps, bungalows, isolated and studied in the light of prophylaxis.

Medicine in these few short years has grown out of an ignorant mysticism, and even the veriest ordinary has found inspiration and public health has become a tangible reality.

There is even a serum therapy for hog cholera and a vaccine for black leg. Notwithstanding all these forces now fighting to preserve the life of man many diseases are on the rapid increase.

Whereas typhoid in fifteen years has been reduced from 32.00 to 17.9, and diphtheria from 29.6 to 13.3; cancer in the same time has increased from 67.9 to 73.9; diabetes has increased from 11.5 to 13.3; scarlet fever from 12.2 to 13.6; ulcer of the stomach from 2.9 to 4.0; Bright's disease from 8.4 to 9.5.

Considering the scientific discoveries of the last few years and the activities of public health control, all of which were denied to our grandfathers, what do the actual facts indicate?

For a half century men have been bidding adieu to the plague and pestilence, and the open privy except in rural communities and backwoods cities, where our butler is made, has been stamped out.

Millions of dollars have been spent to protect waterwells and sources of water supply. New York City alone has spent two hundred millions in an effort to obtain an uncontaminated water supply. With all these forces working to protect the life of man, let us repeat, should any disease be on the increase?

The handicaps of ignorance under which our grandfathers struggled, suffered, and died have been removed from modern life through the intelligent application of scientific discoveries of recent years.

With epidemics and plagues stamped out, why do we go on with such pride at the figures of the present day when those figures indicate to us conclusively that in spite of all our wisdom in spite of the army of public health workers and scientists who devote their lives to the control of disease, we permit the deaths of 400,000 children under ten years of age in the United States every year?

In the old days there was no guiding hand to lead the way out of the wilderness of disease. Wine soured, food rotted, until Pasteur, with an almost intuitive insight into the operations of nature, gave to the world his knowledge of micro-organisms.

Cow's milk was not then protected by Pasteur as it is now protected, thanks to his genius in New York, Chicago, and certain other cities.

Klein, following Pasteur, had not yet wrestled with the probabilities of communicating diseases through milk. Koch had not yet discovered tuberculin, a discovery which alone has paid for all the time and energy expended upon micro-organisms.

It was not then known that milk, by exposure to the contaminations of the milk, the air, the utensils in the stable, or as it passes through the milking process, becomes more and more laden with dangers.

The passing of septic sore throat and tuberculosis by the milk route was unsuspected. Straining, cooling, clarifying, pasteurizing were never dreamed of in the struggle against the army of micro-organisms ever battling against the life of the child.

The toxic substances which microbial life produce, extending to the poisoning of food through decomposition, were not even hinted at in dreams. Bacterial diseases of plants and animals went their destroying way unmolessted. The silk industry of France was threatened with silk worm disease.

Pasteur, knowing the meaning of micro-organisms, was called into action. He discovered the disease, conquered it, and eliminated it, making it possible for the silk industry to continue. In the old days there was no remedy for such disease. When the disease appeared death and despair were ushered in. Today the disease frightens no one.

Another way of destroying the livestock of France. Again we see Pasteur. By his method of vaccination he controlled the disease, which is now almost eliminated from the herds of Europe and America. Its terrors are asleep.

These forces, strengthened still further with the introduction of Lister's aseptic and antiseptic surgery have brought death with a conquering hand.

Infections diseases are no longer a nightmare. Yet it was only in the early eighties that they were traced to their origin, the germs isolated and studied in the light of prophylaxis.

There is even a serum therapy for hog cholera and a vaccine for black leg. Notwithstanding all these forces now fighting to preserve the life of man many diseases are on the rapid increase.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

Mabel Taliaferro.

Thirty aged men and women are shown in the forthcoming production "God's Half Acre," starring Mabel Taliaferro, under the direction of Edwin Carewe. They take the parts of the inmates of Halloway's Hotel, a home for the aged portrayed in the play. Put together, the ages of those who are ranged around a dining table in the picture would aggregate almost 3,000 years.

Miss Taliaferro was one of the first stars of the legitimate stage to appear in moving pictures. Her success on the screen has long since been assured. She has appeared recently in "Her Great Price" and "The Snow Bird."

The diminutive star of the Ziegfeld "Follies" who makes her motion picture debut in Famous Players productions on the Paramount Program. As she is celebrated as one of the cleverest little dancers and comedienne on Broadway, it is especially fitting that she should first appear on the screen in the title role of "Susie Snowflake," a musical comedy star who scandalizes the home folks back in the old town by bringing her Gotham tactics to bear on the little rural community.

by every visitor to Gotham town for the last three years. Miss Pennington's diminutive stature, her tremendous black eyes, her indescribably appealing personality and her genuine histrionic ability—which have already won her the foremost rank among musical comedy stars—will unquestionably assure her an equal success on the screen. There is something irresistibly appealing about "Susie," and Miss Pennington has caught the charm of this little dancer who scandalizes the home folks back in the old town by bringing her Gotham tactics to bear on the little rural community.

"BILLIE BURKE WEDNESDAY." announcing the booking of "Gloria's Romance" for the Beverly Theatre, the management believe that they have arranged for the best film attraction for their patrons that money can secure. Billie Burke, the fascinating international star, has been secured as the star of the production, though it took a salary of $4,000 per week to induce the Titan-dotted line to place her name on the scenario of "Gloria's Romance" originated in the minds of those famous novelists, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, who are known to people everywhere through their successful stories.

The screen novel will set an absolutely new standard in literary merit or motion picture stories, for it is not to be a blood-and-thunder, slap-dash knock-down-and-drag-out tale, but a logically developed, carefully plotted, interest compelling tale of the romance of a young society woman. Miss Burke in her role of Gloria Statford, the daughter of a New York banker, appears as a youthful and vivacious girl, bubbling over with good spirits and cheerfulness and her love for Richard Frenau, a young broker whom she meets while wintering at Palm Beach. A fascinating mystery develops when Frenau suddenly disappears and Gloria sets out to discover what became of him. The story opens at fashionable Palm Beach and later scenes are laid in the homes of the wealthy along Riverside Drive, New York. During the production, Miss Burke will wear a score or more of specially designed gowns from the studios of Henri Bendel, Lucile and Balmain, and in this respect feminine patrons will find the film a regular fashion board. Episodes of Billie Burke will be presented free on Wednesday. As an extra added attraction Wednesday the Beverly will present Edith Storey in "The Shop Girl," in five acts.

Chandos, after Dus-kara's refusal to sell the land, mines a piece of ground and lures the Indians to the trap by scattering bottles of gun powder about. The Indians find the bottles and get drunk. While they are celebrating, the mine is exploded and the entire camp is wiped out.

Fifty actors are used in the making of the picture. All but three went through the explosion scene uninjured.

Violet Mersereau, the dainty and fascinating star of Bluebird Photoplays, will be the star in "Broken Fetters," announced for exhibition at the Beverly Theatre tonight, with William Garwood her leading man. The scenes are laid in China, during the early progress of the play, and the culmination of the story brings the characters to New York's Chinatown where thrilling encounters and various exciting episodes maintain the interest in the drama at extreme tension.

One does not have to go back fifty years to stress the fact that epidemics that swept over the country, now a curse almost of the past.

Yellow fever counted its victims by the thousands, while smallpox kept pace with this dread disease as a slaughterer of men.

Pasteur had not yet thrown light upon the growth and diseases of plants; upon the nutritional and pathological processes of animals; upon the canning, drying, refrigerating, and spoiling of food; upon the care of water supplies; upon sewage disposal; upon the manufacture of vaccine and serum products; upon public health in general, all of which in recent years have been reduced to definite and scientific formulas.

In the old days there was no guiding hand to lead the way out of the wilderness of disease. Wine soured, food rotted, until Pasteur, with an almost intuitive insight into the operations of nature, gave to the world his knowledge of micro-organisms.

Cow's milk was not then protected by Pasteur as it is now protected, thanks to his genius in New York, Chicago, and certain other cities.

THE CORRECT AGE FOR MARRIAGE.

Curiously seems to be unusually late on a topic about which I had not thought a great deal until asked about it—the proper age at which one should marry. It would of course be impossible for one age to be set down as the answer in this all-embracing subject. There is, however, what may be termed an ideal age to marry. Since a great many letters have come to me as a result of my appearance on the screen, I give this question in consideration which I had not intended to.

The first thing which one must take into consideration is the disposition of the two persons interested. Some young people acquire "balance" and common sense early in life while others remain the child until far into their teens.

Then the financial future of the couple carries great weight. It has been said "When Poverty comes in at the door Love flies out at the window." Perhaps that is the cynic's view of the question. At any rate the ideal is too sweeping. Love wouldn't mean much if indigent persons were unable to retain it. Nevertheless, one can not do as the old song says, "Live on love and have Cupid wash the dishes." Some couples are "poor" where to be found and food is not essential to life—hard as it may seem. Financial embarrassment may well be called a difficulty in the way of happiness. Not that I would advise people to wait for wealth or ease to marry. One must be satisfied to be-

CHARACTER TEACHING FIRST, SAYS OZARK GATHERING

Monte, Ne, Ark., July 24.—To make character teaching as practicable as the teaching of the three R's is the object of a conference in the Ozark Mountain hamlet today and continues through July 29. The gathering is known as "The Character Building Conference," and educators of national prominence from many states are here. It is the first conference of its kind in this country and its promoters hope the result will be a foundation upon which a better structure of better citizenship may be erected.

The meeting is being promoted by a national organization connected with which are Charles Henry Davis of Massachusetts, Gov. Capper of Kansas, William Huttig of Kansas City, Mo., and many others. W. V. Thomas of Springfield, Mo., president of the Missouri State School Teachers' association, is acting as director of the conference.

The local committee has arranged to entertain the educators during the week of the conference with an Ozark Mountain fiddlers' contest, an event which probably will ever remain fresh in the memory of those who witness and hear it.

SAILOR WHO HAS BAKED BEANS FOR TWENTY YEARS TELLS HOW TO DO IT.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Cleveland, July 24.—Baked beans may be Boston's forte but Pat Finnegan, cook on the naval training ship Dorothea stationed here, knows a thing or two about that delicacy. He's been baking them for twenty years, for seventeen years he was cook on a United States battleship, and he's prepared 124,960 gallons of baked beans.

Here's his recipe for beans: "Get with the best navy beans; soak 'em one hour in cold water; then boil two hours slowly; put salt pork in white boiling; bake three hours in a slow oven, with plenty of molasses, and a pinch of mustard. A whole onion adds a 'tasty flavor.'"

GINGLES' JINGLES

JUST REMEMBER.

Just remember when you lose your grip on life and start to skid, when the fret and worry stuff accumulates thick beneath your lid, that you're putting over foolish stunts, you're heading into clear, you are backing off the map for good, a flivver out of gear. For there's no one going to help a guy who will not help himself, there is no one going to yank him from his roost upon the shelf; he can sit and he can worry, he can whine and he can croak, and the thing to him is mortal grief—to others is a joke. They can't see your troubles in the way that you have got them doped, so they cannot sympathize with you, as you had wished and hoped. They have also got affairs in life to which they must attend and the troubles may be worse than yours with which they must contend; but they smile and keep a plugging; keep a working with a will, but they haven't got the time to push a dead one up the hill.

WOMEN'S FAIRNESS TO WOMEN.

Among the many fallacies which men really enjoying holding about the other sex is the cherished delusion that women do not take any interest in the beauty of other women. I lunched in town yesterday. At my table a group of three young to middle-aged women were chatting together, and of course I could not help hearing what they said.

And what do you think was the chief topic of their conversation? Not business, nor men, nor clothes, nor questions of the day. No, three-quarters of the time these women talked about a pretty girl who had come into the restaurant and about her likeness to another pretty girl whom they knew.

Could a Man Say More? When I see a pretty girl, I just can't keep my eyes off her," said one of the women. And the others agreed.

Could a man say more? Perhaps some cynic will remind me that by my own admission these women were middle-aged and might be able to take a more unprejudiced interest in other women's beauty than a younger woman.

Perhaps, but I happen to know younger women who feel the same.

One of my friends unquestionably takes more interest in a pretty girl than her husband does. I have seen

BELGIAN ARMY IS READY FOR MINIATURE VERDUN ON ITS OWN FRONT IN WEST

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, July 24.—Belgian troops are ready for a miniature battle of Verdun on their own front, if the fortunes of war bring it to them. Visitors to the Belgian front are few, but King Albert did not object to Sir Charles Wakefield, the lord mayor of London, looking over the Belgian lines. Out-door life, "roughing it," fresh air and hardships have done to the Belgian soldiers what they have done to all other men in Europe, converted them into marvells of strength and health.

"In 1913 I was present at the Belgian maneuvers," says the lord, "but since then the Belgian troops seem to have developed physically. They're bigger and stronger than the Belgian soldiers of 1913. And they are equipped and ready for whatever comes."

I have said there was not cover in the whole place to hide a rat. As the day advanced it was flooded with soft, fresh light till it had the fragrant sunniness of the South African veld. At other times I should have liked the place, but now it seemed to suffocate me. The free moorlands were prison walls, and the keen hill air was the breath of a dungeon.

I tossed a coin—heads right, tails left—and it fell heads, so I turned to the north. In a little I came to the brow of the ridge which was the containing wall of the pass.

I saw the highroad for maybe ten miles and far down it something that was moving and which I took to be a motorcar. Beyond the ridge I looked on a rolling green moor, which fell away into wooded glens. Now, my life on the veld has given me the eyes of a lion, and I can see things for which most men need a telescope.

Away down the slope, a couple of miles away, men were advancing like a row of beaters at a shoot. I dropped out of sight behind the skyline. That way was shut to me, and I must try the bigger hills to the south beyond the highway. The car I had noticed was getting nearer, but it was still a long road off, with some very steep gradients before it. I ran hard, crouching low except in the hollows, and as I ran I kept scanning the brow of the hill before me.

Was it imagination or did I see figures—one, two, perhaps more—moving in a glen beyond the stream?

CHAPTER VII.

The Spectacle Roadman's Adventure. I am hemmed in on all sides in a patch of land there is only one chance of escape—you must stay in the patch and let your enemies search it and not find you. That was good sense, but how on earth was I to escape notice in that tablecloth of a place?

I would have buried myself to the neck in mud and lain below water or climbed the tallest tree. But there was not a stick of wood, the bog holes were little puddles, the stream was a slender trickle. There was nothing but short heather and bare hill bent and the white highway.

Then in a bright of-road beside a heap of stones I found the roadman. He had just arrived and was wearily flinging down his hammer. He stared at me with fishy eyes, yawning.

"Confound the day I ever left the herdin!" he said as if to the world at large. "There I was my ain maister. Now, I'm a slave to the government—rethered to the roadside, wi' sair een and a back like a suckle."

He took up the hammer, struck a stone, dropped the implement, with an oath and put both hands to his ears. "Mercy on me! My head's burstin!" he cried.

He was a wild figure, about my own size, but much bent, with a week's beard on his chin and a pair of big horn spectacles.

"I canna daot," he cried again. "The surveyor maun just report me. I'm for my bed."

I asked him what was the trouble, though indeed that was clear enough.

"The trouble is that I'm no sober. Last night my dochter, Merran, was waddit, and they danced till fower in the byre. Me and some ither chieles sat down to the drinkin'—and here I am. Peety that I ever lookit on the wine when it was red!"

I agreed with him about bed.

"It's easy speakin'," he moaned. "But I get a postcard yestereen sayin' that the new road surveyor would be round the day. He'll come, and he'll no find me, or else he'll find me, and either way I'm a done man. I'll awa back to my bed and say I'm no weel, but I doot that'll no help me, for they ken my kind o' no weelness."

Then I had an inspiration. "Does the new surveyor know you?" I asked.

"No him. He's just been a week at the job. He rins about in a wee motorcar and wad speir the inside out o' a whack."

"Where's your house?" I asked, and was directed by a wavering finger to the cottage by the stream.

"Well, back to your bed," I said, "and sleep in peace. I'll take on your job for a bit and see the surveyor."

He stared at me blankly; then, as the notion dawned on his fuddled brain, his face broke into the vacant drunkard's smile.

"You're the billy!" he cried. "I'll be easy enough managed. I've finished that bing o' stanes, so you needn't chap on mair this forenoon. Just take the barry and wheel'enuch metal frae you quarry down the road to make another blug the morn."

"My name's Alexander Trumple, and I've been seven year at the trade and twenty afore that herdin' on Leithen water. My friends ca' me Beky and whiles Specky, for I wear glasses, bein' weak i' the sight. Just you speak the surveyor fair and ca' him sir, and he'll be fell pleased. I'll be back or midday."

I borrowed his spectacles and filthy old hat; stripped off coat, waistcoat and collar and gave him them to carry home; borrowed, too, the foul stump of a clay pipe as an extra property.

He indicated my simple task and without more ado set off at an amble backward. Bed may have been his chief object, but I think there was also something left in the foot of a bottle. I prayed that he might be safe under cover before my friends arrived on the scene.

Then I set to work to dress for the part.

I opened the collar of my shirt—it was a vulgar blue and white check such as plowmen wear—and revealed a neck as brown as any tinkler's. I rolled up my sleeves, and there was a forearm that might have been a blacksmith's—sunburnt and rough with old scars. I got my boots and trouser legs all white from the dust of the road and hitched up my trousers, tying them with string below the knee.

Then I set to work on my face. With a handful of dust I made a watermark round my neck—the place where Mr. Trumple's Sunday ablutions might be expected to stop. I rubbed a good deal of dirt also into the sunburn of my cheeks. A roadman's eyes would, no doubt, be a little inflamed, so I contrived to get some dust in both of mine, and by dint of vigorous rubbing produced a bleary effect.

The sandwiches Sir Harry had given me had gone off with my coat, but the roadman's lunch, tied in a red handkerchief, was at my disposal.

I ate with great relish several of the thick slabs of scone and cheese and drank a little of the cold tea. In the handkerchief was a local paper tied with string and addressed to Mr. Turnbull—obviously meant to solace his midday leisure. I did up the bundle again and put the paper conspicuously beside it.

My boots did not satisfy me, but by dint of kicking among the stone I reduced them to the granite-like surface which characterizes a roadman's footgear. Then I bit and scraped my finger nails till the edges were all cracked and uneven. The men I was matched against would miss no detail.

I broke one of the boot laces and retied it in a clumsy knot and loosed the other so that my thick gray socks bulged over the uppers. Still no sign of anything on the road. The motor I had observed half an hour ago must have gone home.

My toilet complete, I took up the barrow and began my journey to and from the quarry, a hundred yards off. I remember an old scout in Rhodesia who had done many queer things in his day, once telling me that the secret of playing a part was to think yourself into it. You could never keep it up, he said, unless you could manage to convince yourself that you were it.

So I shut off all other thoughts and switched them on the road mending.

I thought of the little white cottage as my home. I recalled the years I had spent herding on Leithen Water. I made my mind dwell lovingly on sleep in a box bed and a bottle of cheap whisky. Still nothing appeared on that long white road.

Now and then a sheep wandered off the heather to stare at me. A heron sopped down to a pool in the stream and started to fish, talking no more notice of me than if I had been a millstone. On I went trundling my loads of stone with the heavy step of the professional.

Soon I grew warm, and the dust on my face changed into solid and abiding grit. I was already counting the hours till evening should put a limit to Mr. Turnbull's monotonous toil.

Suddenly a crisp voice spoke from the road, and looking up, I saw a little two-seated car and a round faced young man in a bowler hat.

"Are you Alexander Turnbull?" he asked. "I am the new county road surveyor. You live at Blackheathfoot and have charge of the section from Laidlawbyres to the Rigg? Good! A fair bit of road, Turnbull, and not badly engineered. A little soft about a mile off, and the edges want cleaning. See you look after that. Good morning. You'll know me the next time you see me."

Clearly my getup was good enough for the dreading surveyor.

I went on with my work, and as the morning grew toward noon I was cheered by a little traffic. A baker's van breasted the hill and sold me a bag of ginger biscuits, which I stowed in my trousers pockets against emergencies. Then a herd passed with sheep and disturbed me somewhat by asking loudly, "What has become o' Specky?"

"In bed wi' the colic," I replied, and the herd passed on.

Just about midday a big car stole down the hill, glided past and drew up a hundred yards beyond. Its three occupants descended, as if to stretch their legs, and sauntered toward me. Two of the men I had seen before from the window of the Galloway inn, one lean, sharp, dark; the other comfortable and smiling. The third had the look of a countryman, a vet, perhaps, or a small farmer. He was dressed in ill cut knickerbockers, and the eye in his head was as bright and wary as a hen's.

"Morning," said the last. "That's a fine, easy job o' yours."

I confronted Three Pairs of Eyes That Missed Nothing.

Sopped down to a pool in the stream and started to fish, talking no more notice of me than if I had been a millstone. On I went trundling my loads of stone with the heavy step of the professional.

"Morning," said the last. "That's a fine, easy job o' yours."

I had not looked up on their approach, and now when accused I slowly and painfully straightened my back, after the manner of roadmen; spat vigorously, after the manner of the low Scot; and regarded them steadily before replying. I confronted three pairs of eyes that missed nothing.

"There's want jobs, and there's better," I said sententiously. "I wad rather hae yours, sittin' a' day on your binnerlands on thae cushions. It's you and your muckle caws that wreck my roads! If we a' had our rights you sud be made to mend what ye break!"

The bright eyed man was looking at the newspaper lying beside Turnbull's bundle.

"I see you get your papers in good time," he said.

I glanced at it casually. "Aye, in good time. Seein' that that paper came out last Saturday, I'm just fower days late."

He picked it up, glanced at the superscription and laid it down again. One of the others had been looking at my boots, and a word in German called the speaker's attention to them.

"You've a fine taste in boots," he said. "Those were never made by a country shoemaker."

"They were not," I said readily. "They were made in London. I got them frae the gentleman that was here last year for the shootin'. What was his name now?" And I scratched a forgetful head.

Again the sleek one spoke in German. "Let us get on," he said. "This fellow is all right."

They asked one last question: "Did you see any one pass early this morning? He might be on a bicycle or he might be on foot."

I very nearly fell into the trap and told a story of a bicyclist hurrying past in the gray dawn. But I had the sense to see my danger. I pretended to consider very deeply.

"I wasna up very early," I said. "Ye see my dochter was merrit lest nicht and we kept it up late. I opened the house door about seven—and there was naebodie on the road then. Since I came up here there has been just the baker and the Ruchill herd, besides you gentlemen."

One of them gave me a cigar, which I smelled gingerly and stuck in Turnbull's bundle. They got into their car and were out of sight in three minutes.

My heart leaped with an enormous relief, but I went on wheeling my stones. It was as well, for ten minutes later the car returned—one of the occupants waving a hand to me. These gentry left nothing to chance.

I finished Turnbull's bread and cheese, and pretty soon I had finished the stones. The next step was what puzzled me.

I could not keep up this road making business for long. A merciful Providence had kept Mr. Turnbull indoors, but if he appeared on the scene there would be trouble. I had a notion that the cordon was still tight round the glen and that if I walked in any direction I should meet with questioners.

But get out I must. No man's nerve could stand more than a day of being spied on.

The Why of Advertising!

In early days in this country, when communities were small personal acquaintances and the "neighborhood" spirit held the merchant in secure possession of his patrons. The virtue of "Printer's Ink" was not yet understood, nor was the need for it felt—the world had to grow up to it.

But after awhile came the RAILROADS. Following in the wake of the steam cars came population, stores, factories, mills, newspapers, land boomers, suburban developments, telephones and street cars, rising rents and land values, big building projects, and vastly larger ways of doing things.

The "neighborhood" spirit passed away—the flocks no longer knew their shepherd—the man who vigorously reached out for trade got it and the old timers who waited for trade to hunt them up got out of business or went to the wall.

At last the country had grown up to a need for advertising! As populations increased, the newspapers kept pace, and in due time THE AD CAME INTO ITS OWN! Today American merchants are the best and most liberal advertisers in the world—and the American department store has no equal on the globe!

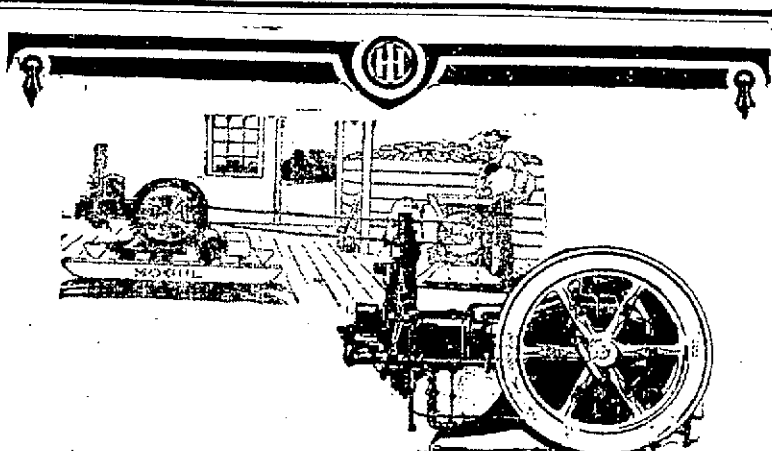

The splendid scale on which retail merchandising is conducted in this country is possible only thru the American merchants' liberal use of newspaper space.

Newspaper advertising pays in this progressive land as it does nowhere else on this earth! Why? Because here in America the high, the low, the rich, the poor, all sorts and conditions of people, READ THE DAILY NEWS-PAPERS!

And—did you ever stop to think that THE NEWSPAPER IS THE ONLY THING PRINTED BY THE HAND OF MAN THAT EVERYBODY DOES READ!

Fresh, crisp and bristling with interest, The Daily Gazette conveys a faithful daily record of what is going on in the world, and it also conveys the DAILY STORY OF THE STORES.

You read the NEWS in order to keep up with the intelligence of YOUR DAY—you read the STORE NEWS in order to know how to BUY. The time has arrived when people read their newspapers, ADS AND ALL!

Low Price Loses out Against Low Cost

PRICE may sell some things to farmers, but price alone is a poor argument compared with the records for low cost of operation made by Mogul kerosene engines.

Because they run on kerosene, Mogul engines produce farm power at the lowest possible cost.

You know what gasoline costs. You know, too, what kerosene costs. Take the difference—multiply it by the number of gallons of fuel an engine will consume in five years, figuring one pint of fuel per horse power per hour.

At what price must you buy a gasoline engine to make it cost you as little as a Mogul does? Could you afford to accept a gasoline engine as a gift? See the dealer about this. He has the figures all worked out for you on all sizes of Mogul engines from 1 to 50 H. P.

Forty Years Ago

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, July 24, 1876—The crosswalk on Bluff street at the intersection of North Fourth street has finally received long-needed repairs.

Harvest hands were numerous on the streets yesterday and today. The demand is fair and the supply ample. The price asked per day ranged from $1.30 to $2.25.

The news on Saturday evening that the Mutuals had been beaten by St. Paul Red Caps, of that city by a score of 34 to 11, created considerable surprise and excitement. Three successful defeats, two of them pretty bad ones, naturally raised the question: "What can the matter be?" A dispatch to the Chicago Times on Sunday said the Mutuals went into the game badly crippled, their catcher and pitcher being unfit for duty.

F. Quinn, of the firm of McClernan & Co., left today for a trip to Milwaukee, Chicago and other places on the lake.

The shoe store of A. Richardson & Co. was broken into on Saturday and some $50 worth of goods taken. One of the windows in the workshop in the rear of the store was broken and an entrance gained. The burglars were moderate in their greed, considering what there was to be stolen.

The news is being tried today for breaking into Mr. Davis' house in La Prairie last week. This gentleman is a hardened criminal, having served two terms in the penitentiary, and will soon be returned to this name is Williams, though he used another when indicted before.
